THANKS CUTICURA FOR COMPLETE CURE

At a point near Fern Hill, on the Frazer railroad, the men were overtaken by the crowd in a cornfield, and a fierce fight followed. Stones and clubs were used, and both men were terribly beaten before they were subdued and brought to town in a wagon.

In this place a yelling mob of several hundred men surrounded the police station and magistrate's office, and there were all sorts of cries against the men. Both magistrate's were out of town, and finally Judge Butler was summoned and the men were taken to the courthouse under guard of the officers, where they were given a brief hearing and committed to await trial at court on charges of assaulting an officer, with intent to kill.
